

Invisible Infrastructure

Latin America treats women's economic autonomy as a social agenda. It is infrastructure — and the region is operating below capacity.

$6.7 Trillion

Lost in human capital wealth across Latin America and the Caribbean.

The price of gender gaps in lifetime earnings.

Women hold 38%

Of global human capital wealth — the value of citizens' future earnings.

A third or less in lower-middle-income countries.

SHARE OF FUTURE LIFETIME EARNINGS

38%

WOMEN

62%

MEN

The Access Gap

Two in three women in Latin America have a financial account.

In digital payments the gap is wider still: 55% against 64%.

HAS A FINANCIAL ACCOUNT, 2024

Women

Men

8-POINT GAP

21.4% of GDP

The value of unpaid care work in Latin America.

It appears in no national account.

2038

The year people over 60 will equal children under 14 for the first time.

If there will be fewer workers tomorrow, can the region afford to underuse the ones it already has?

Fifty Women

One intensive month in Sayula, Jalisco.
Almost all fifty finished.

The binding constraint was never information. It was expecting to be rejected.

How much longer?

The question is no longer whether Latin America can afford to invest in women's economic autonomy.

It is how much longer it can afford not to.

READ THE FULL NOTE →