Financial Health Is a Right

Not a Privilege • A 501(c)(3) Nonprofit • Since 2017

We build economic mobility infrastructure.

The affordability crisis is a mobility crisis. FinMango uses data and technology to fix the systemic barriers — housing, healthcare, debt, and predatory lending — holding back the financial health of young adults and vulnerable communities.

Research

We identify the systemic barriers blocking economic mobility. Partnerships with Google Health and academic institutions build the evidence base decision-makers rely on.

🎓

Education

We equip the next generation to climb — reaching students before student loans, before credit cards. Free programs span income levels, from suburbs to inner-city schools.

Ambassadors

Our global ambassador network carries what we measure to the schools, universities, and agencies that can act on it — and reports back what financial health looks like where they live.

🥭 What We Build

- Free financial tools — calculators, simulators & games
- Open curriculum for educators and students
- Barrier Breakers — youth entrepreneurship competition
- Ambassador Program — a global advocacy network
- Intelligence Platform — open economic data

📊 The Problem We're Solving

- 37% of U.S. adults couldn't cover a $400 emergency with cash (Federal Reserve, 2025)
- 56% of young adults say financial worries hurt their mental health (Harvard, 2023)
- 31% of adults say the American Dream still holds true (WSJ/NORC, 2025)
- The affordability crisis is, at its core, a mobility crisis

🌍 Who We Serve

Students & Young Adults
Reaching learners before debt locks in, with tools and lessons built for real life.

Educators & Schools
